NORTH ALBANY.

We thank the kind neighbors and friends who were so kind in helping us in the sickness and death of our dear loved one who was taken but never will be forgotten.

May God's blessing be with them all forever.

Mr. and Mrs. Elick Horn.

I wish all of our hearts
Were as pure in God's sight
As the one that was taken
From our home tonight.
Jesus gave her to stay
Just for a little while
To teach us His way
By our darling's bright smiling face.
And may the grace of our Lord
Rest in our hearts tonight.
May it shine in our faces forever,
Make pure in our Heavenly Father's sight.
All God's works are done in love,
Though our darling lies fast asleep,
We know her soul has gone above
For her Heavenly Father to keep.

TRYING TO STOP WAKES

Will Be No More In Ireland, If Catholic Clergymen Can Prevent It

Worcester, Mass., July 18.—That ancient institution known as the wake must go. That is, Rev. John J. McKeon of Straide, Ire., says there is no use in wakes as they have been conducted for the last five or six centuries.

There will be no more wakes in Ireland, if the Catholic clergy of Ireland can prevent it, he says, and he thinks it would be a good plan if the wakes in the United States were to fall in line.

Father McKeon was talking about the wakes in A. O. H. hall. He is in the United States for the purpose of raising funds to erect a church at Straide beside the grave of Michael Davitt.

TRYING TO FIND OUT HIS DUTY

Candidate Vahey Denies Any Intent to Retire

HE WANTS TO BE GOVERNOR

States That His Course May Be Changed If Subsequent Events Prove Such Action Necessary—Has Been Assured That Foss Will Not Run Against Him—His Position Outlined In Formal Statement

Boston, July 18.—James H. Vahey, in a statement made public, declares he has no intention of withdrawing from the contest for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Mr. Vahey says that from all he can learn Congressman Eugene N. Foss has no intention of running for governor, and that Foss' statement to him was that he favored Vahey's candidacy and would do all he could to advance the interests of the man who headed the ticket on which he had second place a year ago. The statement says in part:

"I have no intention of withdrawing from the contest for the nomination. I have Mr. Foss' assurance that he would not think of being the candidate against me. I have no intention of being arrayed against him.

"I am trying as hard as any man who was ever placed in such a peculiar and difficult position to find out exactly what my duty is. If I reach the conclusion after deliberation and reflection that my clear duty to the people of the state and to my own conscience requires me to change the course which I have already marked out, I shall have no hesitation whatever in performing that duty with all the courage and strength I possess.

"I am only interested in the success of the principles for which I have been fighting these many years. They are greater and loftier than any personal ambition of mine. So far as I am concerned I shall do nothing to jeopardize in the slightest degree the victory which is bound to come this fall if the men who are entrusted with responsibility and power in the leadership of the Democratic party will exercise the sound sense which this exigency requires.

"I have every confidence that Mr. Foss is actuated by the same motives, and will pursue the same course, because I believe that he desires the success of these principles rather than the gratification of any personal ambition, however lofty and honorable it may be."
